No Change @ BART?

At the Stations - Wait for the Next Update

Why do many of the stations that serve the poorer members of society seem to have the most problems? It's not about fare evasion. When people need to add fare, why is it next to impossible, because the machines don't take bills. Or they take them and keep them.

And, it can be the same with buying a Clipper card. Money in and nothing out. What's the problem? It almost seems intentional. But given how little attention is paid to the real functioning of the stations, it is doubtful that this is anything but neglect, which is about the same thing.

Transparency? Open the Books!

BART is in bad shape financially. Even if this tax measure on the November ballot passes, BART won't have enough money to maintain operations, or so they say. If people are going to vote on this, they need to know where the money will go. And one way to know this is to know how the money is spent now.

BART is a public agency, but getting the real details is difficult. How about a list of how many people are in management and what their responsibilities are?

And BART the land baron? What's the real budget of this Transit Oriented Development? Is the new tax money going to be put in the same hands as in the past? That shouldn't happen. There are people who know what the system needs and one is reading this right now. Workers & riders should have oversight!.

Free the MN15!

The movie, "When the ICE Melts" shows some of the organizing of tens of thousands of people in Minneapolis that brought an end to Trump's Metro Surge that sent nearly 4000 ICE and Border Control agents into their city. They showed us that it is possible to defend ourselves and our neighbors

Now it is time for us to stand with them.

In June, the Federal government filed charges against 15 people, the MN15, for taking part in the organizing against the ICE occupation. They face prison sentences of three to six years or more.

On the Lines - Deferred Maintenance? Or Deferred Thinking?

All the delays last week were not very well-timed, if BART is trying to convince people to vote to tax themselves to keep the system running. Some people didn't have any choice but to get in their car to get where they had to go. Others didn't have that choice because they don't have one. Or just finding parking would take longer than waiting on that delayed schedule. But there were a LOT of full trains and some very unhappy passengers.

BART is a necessity in many people's lives. And it has to be a dependable system.

So, what is going on? "Trackside problems?" Another substation malfunction? Or what? It's not a surprise that running these new cars, especially 10-car consists, on an older system isn't working out.

And what has BART's focus been? Continuing work on the CBTC (Communication Based Train Control) system that will allow trains to run closer together, allowing for more trains per hour. This might have been a good idea years ago. But BART is underfunded and threatening major cuts in service!

Seem like there's some deferred thinking going into their upgrade and maintenance program.

We Must Stand Up Against Their Blatant Attacks on our Lives

It couldn't be any clearer that this is a society openly run in the interests of the corporations and the billionaires. Their agenda includes cutting social services for the poor, cutting taxes for the super rich, waging wars, destroying the environment, attacking immigrants, and trying to criminalize those who stand up to them. They don't even try to hide it, doing it all out in the open, and making it increasingly clear for people to see and choose a side.

The U.S. war on Iran has unleashed a new wave of devastation across the Middle East, claiming tens of thousands of lives and displacing millions more. It has worsened the economic struggles of ordinary people in this country and around the world. Diesel prices recently hit an all-time high, with an average of $6.29 per gallon, up 68% since the U.S. war on Iran began. And because diesel powers much of the economy (trains, tractors, trucks), those costs keep pushing up prices for food, goods, and anything that requires shipping.

At the same time, the U.S. continues to back the Israeli genocide in Gaza, which continues despite corporate news channels trying to keep it off the news. Even as Palestinians face mass starvation, the U.S. is helping Israel accelerate the genocide by providing Israel with a $2.8 billion weapons package of 40,000 bombs, one of the largest weapons provisions in recent years.

The headlines around artificial intelligence (AI) also keep getting worse. There are warnings that AI will lead to massive layoffs, greater environmental destruction, intensifying global conflicts, and increasing risk that AI technology could get out of control and put humanity at risk. Meanwhile, the Trump administration is lowering the regulations on power plant emissions to allow unregulated gas plants to power the AI boom.

As life becomes increasingly difficult for working people, the corporations, Trump and the billionaires can't even hide how much money they are making. Trump's personal income increased by about 350% in his first year back in office — from $622 million in 2024 to $2.2 billion in 2025, making it the largest financial gain for any president in U.S. history. This is open corruption by using his power as president to enrich himself. And, since Trump's second term began, U.S. billionaires increased their wealth by 22% in 2025 alone, gaining $1.5 trillion in just one year. Meanwhile, since 2025, working class households have been paying about $350 extra per month just to keep up with the rising cost of living.

But in the face of these blatant attacks, it is getting easier to see this society for what it is — a war on ordinary people here and around the world in order to enrich the very few at the top. It is increasingly clear that we cannot leave the future in the hands of billionaires who profit from destruction. It is becoming more urgent for people to choose a side, take a stand, and speak out.

Recently, AI researcher Jacob Coxon resigned from the AI company Anthropic to warn the world that the industry is moving too rapidly, and that companies could soon build AI that humans cannot control, which could put all of humanity at risk. Coxon was willing to walk away from his high-paying job and risk retaliation to send the warning that even those building these systems fear how they will be used under this system of profit, war, and destruction.

And last week, when rapper Macklemore took the stage in New Jersey and declared support for Palestine during an Ed Sheeran tour, NFL stadium owners united to pressure Sheeran into removing him from the remaining dates. Robert Kraft, billionaire owner of the New England Patriots, led the effort to threaten him into silence.

But Macklemore refused to be silenced, and defended why he stood with Palestine and against genocide. Since then, other artists on the tour have followed suit, dropping out rather than remaining silent, choosing to side with Palestinians instead of those who defend genocide.

Aaron Rowe, an Irish singer who was opening for Sheeran on the tour, dropped out and had this to say: "as Irish people we know all too well about genocide, forced famine and violent occupation. I cannot stand by and allow billionaires to use their position of power to silence the rightful voices of those who speak up against Israeli genocide and who highlight the savage murder of children. I would lose all respect for myself to carry on as normal."

Rowe's words are for all of us. We cannot let the people in power continue driving us down this path while putting our futures in jeopardy. Every day they maintain control, the greater the threat they pose. The billionaires and politicians who have led us down this path cannot be trusted to get us out of their mess. The situation we face is not easy, but it is pushing more and more people to take a stand in opposition to the powerful. Others can begin to take a stand too. The future is up to us!
